3.0 Introduction

The medical profession has not only a legal but a moral duty to promote high standards of patient care. Medical practitioners must be updated and competent throughout their working life by regularly participating in continuing professional development activities. The Medical (Amendment) Act 2012 is an amendment to the Medical Act 1971 and the Medical Regulations 2017 which came into force on 1st July 2017 are to replace the Medical Regulations 1974. Pursuant to the Medical Act, practitioners are required to register with the Malaysian Medical Council (MMC) to practise medicine in Malaysia. Section 28 (b) of the Act states that a fully registered medical practitioner who desires to renew his annual practising certificate (APC) amongst other criteria would have to provide evidence of sufficient continuing professional development (CPD) points obtained as determined by the Malaysian Medical Council. Thus, CPD has been made a compulsory requirement for the issuance of the APC. The mandatory CPD for registered medical practitioners aims to assure the public that they are up to date in their knowledge and skills throughout their working life by regularly taking part in activities relevant to their practice.

The guidelines are to assist medical practitioners fulfil their mandatory CPD requirements.

4.0 Definition

Variety of Definitions have been given, including:

‘Continuing professional development (CPD) is the range of learning activities through which medical practitioners maintain, develop, update and enhance their knowledge, skills and performance required for safe and appropriate practice in their relevant specialties’.

‘CPD is vital for the performance of the medical practitioner. It covers the development of his knowledge, skills, attitudes and behaviours across all areas of his professional practice. It includes both formal and informal learning activities’.

In a broader sense, most definitions suggest CPD as a continuous ongoing process, building on the initial education of the medical practitioner to ensure his competence is up to date to provide high standards of patient care. The educational activities are self-directed and practice based, tailored to the needs of the individual practitioner.
