

Dr Fadzilah Hasan did a Bachelor of Science (Medical Science) at University of St Andrews, Scotland. She later graduated from University of Manchester with MBBS in 1993 and followed by work experiences in the UK before returning back to Malaysia. She served mainly in the community during her stint in the Ministry of Health. Afterwards she practiced as a General Practitioner until 2017. She also holds a Master in Public Health from University of New South Wales Australia. She obtained a Certificate of Medical Education from University of Newcastle Upon Tyne , United kingdom. She had served the Malaysian Medical Council for two terms. During both terms she was active in the various committees including chairing some such as the ad hoc committee for fraudulent registration , draft charge committee and others. She sat as well as chaired in numerous disciplinary proceedings of the MMC. She was involved in the updating of the Code of Professional Conduct and numerous other guidelines. Currently she is teaching at Newcastle University Medicine Malaysia and believes in life long learning. She firmly holds to the nobility of the profession and believes in MMC stronghold as it's guardian.